MISCELLANEOUS READING.

There resided at Conway, N. H., a well known character-the famous Billy Abbott, both small of statue and old of his age, and who by his humorous wit and wonderful knowledge of every little incident that made this or that place particularly charming and interesting to the historian and the antiquarian, so ingrafted himself into the good favors of the great expounder of the constitution, that he always gave him a seat in his carriage when he rode out to visit the beauties of nature. Billy's associates feeling envious on account of the honor conferred upon him by this distinguished man, one day, after Webster's departure, sarcastically asked Bily, in the crowded bar-room, what he and his friend Webster found to converse about, as they rode around the country.

Billy replied "We usually talk about horitculture, and agriculture, and the different breeds of cattle and horses, and upon these subjects I derive from him a great deal of useful information; and upon such topics I find him little more than my match-but the moment"-he enthusiastically, with a jesture, and a tone of voice becoming the orator himself-"but the moment he alludes to the constitution. I can floor him in a minute!" which was received with great applause, and the Banquo of Envy never again affronted Daniel's rustic favorite. - Ossipee Register.

Fanny Fern ventilates her Religious notions thus:-Real devotion may stroll to church with a gilt-edged, gilt-clasped, velvet prayer-book, with a staring gilt cross on the cover, held by the daintiest yellow gloves, in conjunction with a cobweb handkerchief, heavily freighted with rich lace; real devotion may do this, but it staggers my faith to believe it. It is a relief to me, at any rate, to look away from such a spectacle, to some poor body, in homely, but well-mended clothes, in company with a well thumbed Bible, or prayer book, with the look of having been used; a leaf turned down here, a pencil mark there, perhaps by some dear, toil-hardened hand, cold and white enough now, over which warm tears have dropped, on its pages, during life's great soul-struggle

Judge Field called at our office a few days since, (says the Culpeper Republican,) and showed us a specimen of a natural chemical deposit found in a spring at the foot of one of the ranges of the Rocky Mountains. It is of a whitish cast, granular in its formation, and has the remarkable property of spontaneous increase, enlarging its bulk as it is used. It will, as the Judge believes, make good vinegar, and is, in its natural state, good yeast. It will produce excellent small beer, which we know from having drank some which he had with him. The The Throne of David, or the Rebellion of Prince Judge is making further experiments, the Absalom, by Rev. H. Ingraham, author of the result of which he has promised to communi-
